NEW APPROACHES TO INSPECTION AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT FOR INSPECTORS

The aim of the workshop is to:

- provide opportunities for SICI members to share thinking about and experiences of developing and implementing new approaches to inspection to meet the demands of the 21st century; and
- building on the HMIE presentation at the SICI workshop in Lisbon in December 2007, provide further opportunities to share and explore approaches to the professional development of inspectors.

EDUCATIONAL PROVISION IN SCOTLAND

The Scottish approach to quality improvement

In recent years, Scotland has become identified internationally with a particular approach to accountability and improvement which is built on an explicit combination of internal and external evaluation.

The premise of the approach is that schools must take responsibility for the quality of the education which they provide and be committed to continuous improvement.

Its centrepiece is a set of quality indicators contained in a document called How Good Is Our School? These indicators embody good practice and establish a common language of quality.

SELF EVALUATION OR SELF DELUSION?

self evaluation needs strong, independent external support and moderation to work well
